SCIENTIFIC RATIONALE

It is important to know that following a successful kidney transplant, pregnancy is possible; however, it is a challenging event because of the side effects of immunosuppressive medication, the risk of allograft function deterioration, preeclampsia, hypertensive disorders, premature birth and adverse fetal outcomes. The optimal time to conception continues to remain an area of debate and breast-feeding is also frequently contraindicated, although based on recent reports it should not be discouraged. These and many other issues deserve debate and discussion.

This two days meeting is mainly aimed at an international audience of tx nephrologist, tx surgeons, gynecologists, infectious disease doctors, neonatologists, tx psychologists, living kidney donors and recipients of a kidney transplant. It will help transplant professionals in medical optimization and counseling of renal transplant recipients of childbearing age.
